Across a range of approaches — from figurative to textual, collage to process-based, textual to perceptual — twelve artists investigate the properties of the photographic in its current broad social implications. Basic conditions of photography: its flatness; its indexicality; the apparatus of camera, film or paper; a relationship to time, memory, document, reportage, as they are figured in early 21st century culture are challenged or expanded in these works.

Curators' gallery talk: Tuesday, October 30, 2007, 6 pm
